Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Assembly Bill (AB) 731 would repeal the statutes (§16.643, Wis. Stats.) that establish the ABLE program in Wisconsin. 2015 Wisconsin Act 55 (the 2015-17 Budget Bill) created §16.643, Wis. Stats., which authorizes the creation of support accounts for the benefit of individuals with disabilities. Act 55 required the Department of Administration to implement and administer the program.

The ABLE program is authorized under 26 USC 529A, which allows accounts established for individuals with disabilities to grow tax-free. The funds in these accounts can be used for education, housing, transportation, assistive technology, personal support and other qualified expenses. 29 USC 529A was recently amended to remove the so-called 'home state requirement' for the ABLE program. Under the new federal code, an individual who owns an ABLE account does not need to open the account in the state in which they live in order to qualify for the federal and in-state tax deductions. As a result, individuals who live in Wisconsin could establish accounts in other states while still claiming an in-state tax deduction on the account.

The Department had previously estimated the annual cost to implement and administer the ABLE program to be between $300,000 and $350,000. AB 731 would eliminate the need to create the program at DOA; however, efforts would be needed to guide Wisconsin residents to such accounts in other states. Furthermore, even if accounts are established in other states, Wisconsin may be responsible for disclosure efforts to address securities laws, federal social security program requirements, and State social security and other program eligibility. There may be costs incurred by DOA and other State agencies to address some of these potential requirements; however, the total amount of those costs is indeterminable.
